THE FORTRESS OF CHILLON

A. The moat

Most of the time castles have a moat around them filled with water. At Chillon they didn't have to dig a moat because the castle is built on an island!

B. The drawbridge

It doesn't exist anymore but you can still see the pulleys that were used to let it down.

C. The crenalations

You can see the shape of the crenalations where the battlements used to be on the inner curtain and the keep. They look like drawings on the walls.

D. The arrow slits

You could shoot arrows through these openings of different shapes.

E. The turret

This small watch-tower is a lookout, where you can see far and wide.

F. The sentry walk

The sentries did armed guard duty on these high walkways. All the sentry walks lead to the keep.

G. The keep

This is the highest and strongest tower in the castle. It's where you would keep your treasure.

The constable's dining room

Here is where they are preparing the big feast for the lord of the castle. His favourite meat is boar! There's a dragon hidden in this room. Look hard and you'll find him!

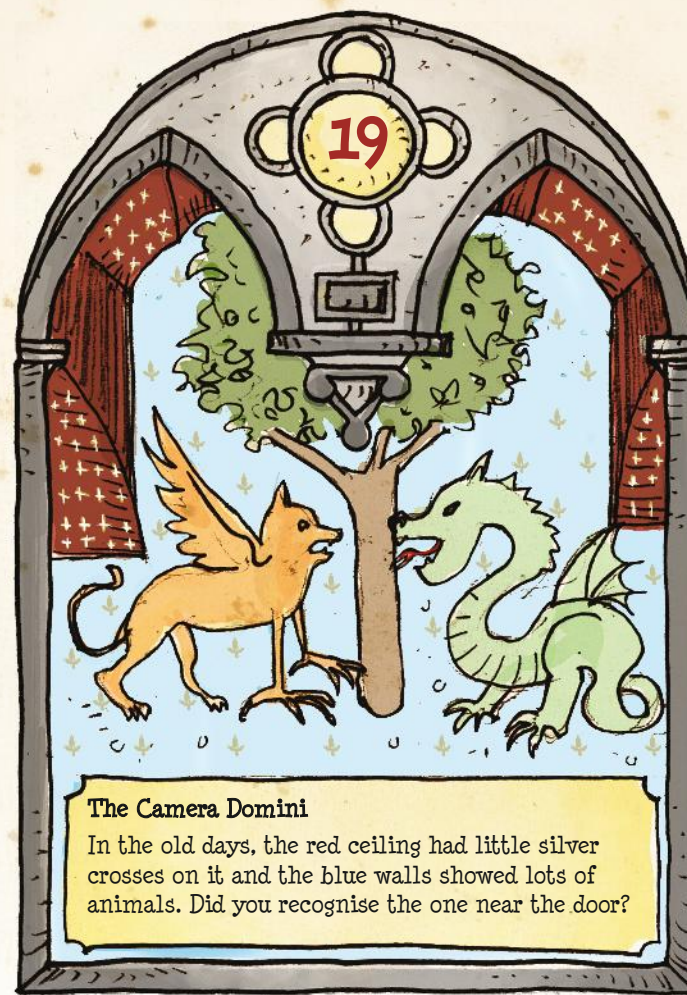

There's a winged dragon carved into the wood of one of the pieces of furniture.

The Bernese bedroom

The canopy bed looks quite short but that's because they used to sleep half-sitting up! Have you found the secret passage? Where does it go?

The secret passage is an escape route from the bedroom. You can go through a door to a bridge and then get into the keep for safety. You can see it from the window.

The Camera Domini

In the old days, the red ceiling had little silver crosses on it and the blue walls showed lots of animals. Did you recognise the one near the door?

It's a dragon! You can see another one above the fireplace.

The latrines

Only the lord of the castle was allowed to sit on this throne! They didn't have toilet paper then. What do you think they used instead?

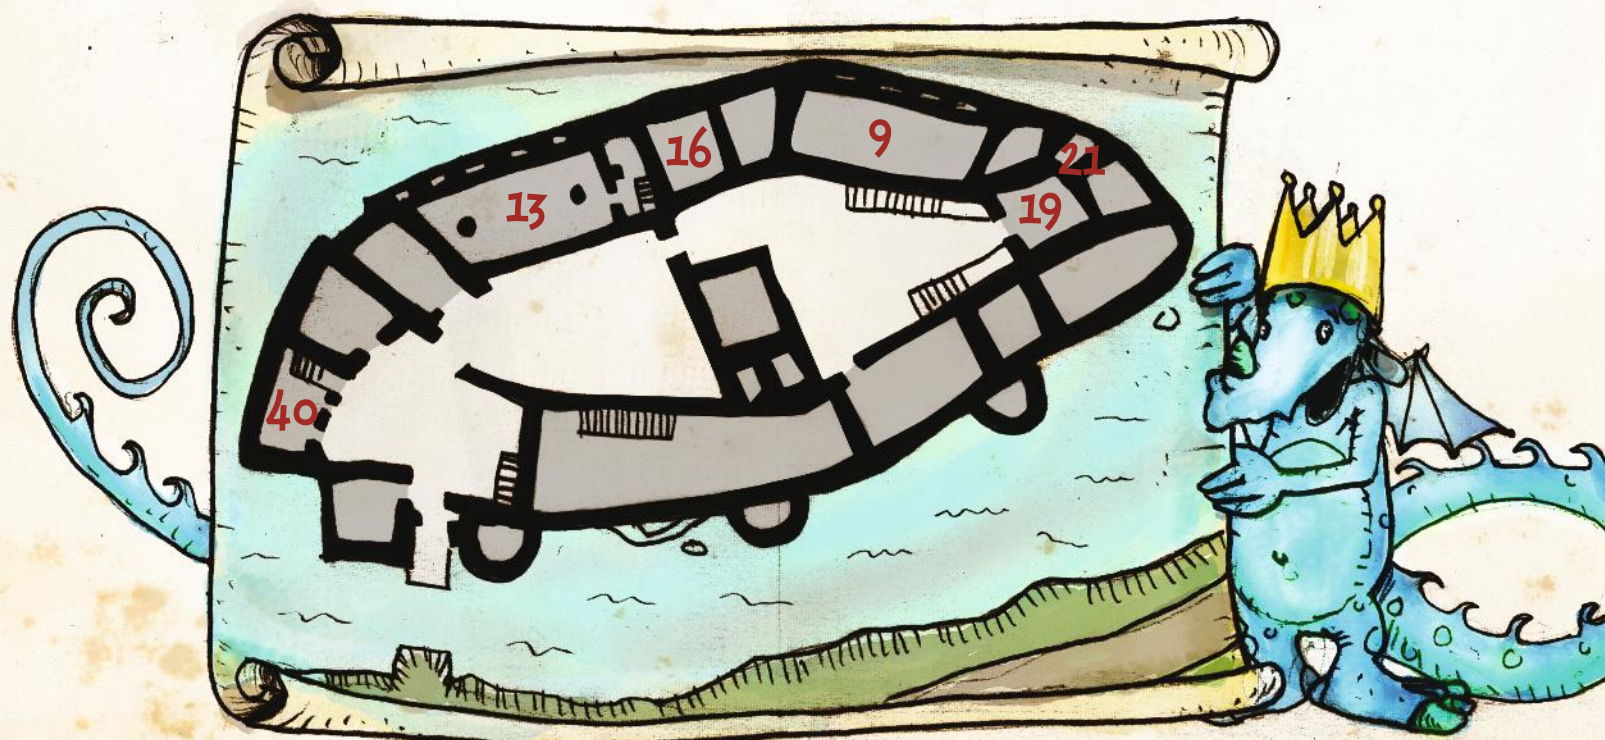

It's a mystery, no-one really knows... But maybe you can find some clues in the drawing! What would you have done?

Bonivard's prison

They say that a prisoner called Bonivard used to pace around the column where he was chained up. Can you see the marks of his footsteps?

These traces can only be seen by the visitors with the most imagination. If you can see them, you're really lucky!

To help you find your way, each drawing has the number of the room where you will find me.

The sentry walk

Sentries wore really heavy suits of armour. The chain-mail weighs more than 17 pounds! Now it's your turn to do sentry duty! Go all the way up to the keep!
